The combination of features disclosed herein serves as the basis for a comprehensive security and property management system that is proactive rather than reactive in that it presents tasks and incidences to be rectified rather than just reports on completed tasks and incidences. Although the system has been exemplified using security and maintenance as primary features, other features can be added as deemed necessary or desired by the ultimate user.

The system of the present invention, in its best mode, is computerized. As such, it is subject to various permutations based on the programmer. The various steps and features that comprise the present invention can be placed and conducted in any suitable order without departing from the scope of the invention. Further, various individual computer programmers of ordinary skill in the field can write different computer code to carry out the various steps and features without undue experimentation. The resulting computer codes for carrying out the various steps and features fall within the scope of the present invention.

The foregoing detailed description of the preferred embodiments and the appended figure and appendices have been presented only for illustrative and descriptive purposes. They are not intended to be exhaustive and are not intended to limit the scope and spirit of the invention. The embodiments were selected and described to best explain the principles of the invention and its practical applications. One skilled in the art will recognize that many variations can be made to the invention disclosed in this specification without departing from the scope and spirit of the invention.
